

Anti-Semite, Anti-Semitism

The term literally means "against Semites." The word Semite originates from the first of the three sons of Noah, who was called Shem. A Semite would be considered a descendent from Noah's son Shem. Shem was the father of Arpachshad, who was the father of Shelah, who was the father of Eber, (the father of the ancient Hebrew peoples). Eber was the ancestor of Abram renamed Abraham, who was the father of Isaac, who was the father of Jacob renamed Israel.

The term Anti-Semitism is a phrase coined by Jews as a "catch-all" racist term developed by Jews when used only against Jews (depending on one's definition of the term racism)... However, 95% of all Jews are not descendants from Noah's son Shem, so the term is misapplied and if used cannot refer to anyone not of Semitic descent, it is in fact a fraudulent term used by Jews. It can however refer to those of Arab descent, and to many European "Caucasian" white people most of who are in fact of Semitic descent even if they do not know it. So, Semites include the Arabs and many European (Caucasians) many of whom descend from Abraham but not to most Jews.

The phrase Anti-Semite is applied when used in opposition to Jews, often for such reasons as their collective destructive influence in society. Most Jews (95%) are not at all descendants of Shem, even though some 90% of the modern Jews refer to themselves as Ashkenaz Jews. If true, these Ashkenazi Jews are really descendants of Ashkenaz, who was the son of Gomer, who was the son of Japheth, who was also a son of Noah (Gen. 10:2). So, it is literally not possible to be an "Anti-Semite" when referring to Jews in a negative manner.

Jews are of a mixed racial identity (and are not from a particular race). As shown, many are of Ashkenazi-Turkish-Edomite-Canaanite people descent. Jews are united by their particular religious belief system which is quite cultic and very clannish. The Jewish religion stems in part from the ancient Pharisees' a sect prevalent in First Century Biblical Israel. The Phariseeism sect developed from various primitive pagan sources that eventually solidified into what is now the Babylonian Talmud. Included in the founding documents of Phariseeism are the writings of the Kabala, a humbo-jumbo mixture of opinions and mystic ideology written and compiled by Jewish sages over the years. Jews do include selected portions of the Hebrew Scriptures to provide religious believability, but the Talmud and the Kabala supersede the precepts written in the Hebrew Bible. The Pharisee sect was condemned by the First Century Prophet Yahshua (Jesus) exactly because of their superstitious ungodliness. Matt. 23:13-33.
